

Stories of some of the sponsored children

Fantu Alemu

Fantu is 19 years old. She is studying textile technology in vocational school. She has been assisted by the project for ten years since grade one. She lives with her mother. Her father is dead. Her mother earns a little income from petty trading, but it was not enough to feed the family and send children to school. Fantu tells the project is providing her with educational materials, transportation, sanitary stuffs, and pays her educational fee. On top of the materials support, Fantu proudly speaks about her spiritual growth and moral development she gained from the project. Her vision is to serve the Lord, and help other poor children when she gets well established in life.

Martha Teklu,

Martha is 19 years old. She has been supported by the project for ten years since she was grade one. Now she is a vocational student learning cooking after completing grade ten. Her parents are very poor and have no enough money to feed their children and send them to school. Martha says the project helped her greatly to have education and make her grow spiritually, and morally. She has a vision of serving others when shi gets established in economic life.
